

Day 2

On my 2nd PD for this project I learned about Keycloak.

Keycloak is service which runs on the server and manages token grants and user access.

A user can authenticate to Keycloak and then based on the user's role and realms they can be granted tokens to authenticate requests against a back end server.

I spent today installing keycloak, setting it up and configuring my back end to use Keycloak as the Authentication provider.